

FREE Half-Day Camp for Children ages 3 to 12 with and without ASD

Spring Break Camp 2020

What is the Spring Break Camp?

Are you looking for a fun experience for your child during their Spring Break this March? The Autism and Developmental Disorders Lab (ADDL) is hosting FREE half-day sessions from March 16th to March 27th! The Spring Break Camp will take place in the ADDL located at Simon Fraser University, Burnaby Campus.

Children ages 3 to 12 years old with and without a diagnosis of Autism Spectrum Disorder will get to engage with one another in various activities, play exciting games, make lots of crafts, and participate in research and learning activities. This experience is available for free through a research fund, so we ask that caregivers complete surveys about their child for research purposes (most surveys can be completed online).

Who can attend?

Children ages 3 to 12 years old with or without a diagnosis of Autism Spectrum Disorder.

We ask that children are able to use the toilet without assistance from staff, otherwise, a caregiver or behavioural interventionist must remain with the child during the session.

Dates and Times:

Children can attend one session on one of the following days:

- Monday, March 16 - 9:00 am to 12:30 pm
